How to read this book

Each example shows two things: what you type, and what happens next. You can copy the line exactly, then change the names to your own.

Words like @Skol mean "pick a person from the list Discord shows you". Words like name: are labels — type the label, then your answer.

Rolling dice

`1d20`	(Rolls one twenty-sided die. The bot shows the number.)
`2d6+3`	(Rolls two six-sided dice, adds 3, shows the total.)
`r1d20+5 attack`	(Same roll with a name on it, so everyone knows what it was for.)

A natural 20 is when the die itself shows 20, before you add anything. A natural 1 is when it shows 1. Both matter in fights.

Making a character

`/char create`	(The bot asks you questions and builds your sheet.)
`/char view show`	(Shows your sheet: your stats, your things, your dice history.)
`/char view show user:@Skol`	(Shows somebody else's sheet.)

Your sheet also lives in its own thread in the character forum. It updates itself — you never have to edit it.

Fighting

`/fight start`	(Everyone rolls to see who goes first.)
`/fight atk stat:str target:@Skol`	(You swing at Skol using your strength.)
`/fight def stat:dex`	(You try to dodge, using how quick you are.)
`/fight resolve`	(The bot compares the two rolls and says what happened.)

If your attack roll shows a natural 1, the attack fails and your next defence is weaker — you roll the die on its own, with no stat added. If your defence roll shows a natural 20, you turn the blow aside AND your next attack gets +2.

Quests

`/quest create`	(Write a new quest.)
`/quest post number:1`	(Put it on the board so players can ask to join.)
`/quest party approve number:1 user:@Skol`	(Let Skol in.)
`/quest run start number:1`	(Begin a run with everyone who was let in.)
`/quest run complete number:1 summary:…`	(Finish it, pay merits, and tell the story.)

Telling the GMs something

/feedback send	(Pick a room, score it out of ten, say your piece. Only GMs see it.)
(the button on your page)	(Ask a GM to update your lore document.)
